

En Route Campsites

Planning your journey

When planning your Winter Sun journey it is vital that you carefully consider the best route for you to take both to your destination and on your return trip. Having decided on your main destination, ferry crossings and your routes between, you need to consider your overnight site stops. To help you plan your route and journey times we have included a map and mileage chart on the inside foldout covers of this brochure. When planning your journey, remember the shorter daylight hours, the possibility of inclement weather, and also the time zones. France and Spain are an hour ahead of the UK. Portugal is on the same time as the UK, so you go back an hour as you cross the border from Spain to Portugal and go forward an hour on the way back.

How far each day?

The Club recommends that drivers should plan to travel no more than 250 to 300 miles in a day and to take a break every two hours. Speed limits for motorhomes and cars towing abroad (see pages 80-93) can be lower than in the UK, so journey times may be longer. See also Carefree's European Driver's Handbook for further country by country details.

From a morning ferry arrival in northern Spain, allow one overnight stop for the eastern Mediterranean sites (down to and including La Manga) and two overnight stops for the other sites.

Safety and Security

The Club does not recommend stopping overnight in lay-bys or service stations, whether on motorways or on other roads. Please be sure to read Carefree's Guide to Winter Sun holidays on pages 80-93, which is packed with advice based on our many years of experience, as well as that of Club members.

Your overnight stop choices

From 1 October until Easter most European campsites close, and some that hope to be open unexpectedly close for a variety of reasons. When travelling it can be difficult to find suitable stopover sites close to your route. To help you and for your safety and security Carefree's knowledgeable team has specially chosen conveniently located sites in France, Spain and Portugal that we are able to pre-book for you as En Route campsites. These appear on the following pages. They guarantee to be open for members who pre-book through Carefree. More often than not you will have the company of other Club members there on site at the same time as you.

These En Route sites have at least some basic facilities open and are at least suitable for one night stays. Many have a basic shop and somewhere to obtain a meal, either on site or nearby. For your own convenience please try to arrive before dark.

Places to enjoy en-route

Many members like to take their time travelling and make time to visit some interesting sites on the way. Several of the En Route campsites we use are close to places of interest and/or of better quality than just a basic stopover, so we think that they warrant more than just an overnight stop. These are indicated by ✨. Campsites, mostly open all year, that also appear in the Carefree Summer brochure are indicated by ▲.
